PUZZLE PAYOFF

Henery Hawk, notebook clutched in one hand and pencil in the other, ran as fast as he could through the woods toward the tree where he knew he would find his friend, Ollie Owl.

When he found Ollie, he pleaded breathlessly for help. "Ollie, please will you do me a big favor?" he panted.

"My my, it must be something very important to make you rush so," said Ollie with a smile. "Of course, I'll be glad to do you a favor, if I can."

"I need your help because you are so smart," Henery replied. "I want to win this puzzle contest, but I don't know nearly all the answers," he explained. "That's why you'll have to solve the puzzle for me."

"But, that wouldn't be right," Ollie protested. "It would be almost like cheating and I wouldn't want to do that."

"Please, Ollie," Henery pleaded. "I need that first prize badly, and I can't win it without your help."

"What is this wonderful prize?" Ollie asked. "I hope it's something that will be instructive and helpful to you."

"It'll help me, all right," Henery told his friend. "It's a little puppy."

Ollie laughed. "What in the world do you need a puppy for?" he asked.

"If I train it to dig," Henery stated. "Then, when the farmer's chickens are in a fenced yard, it can dig a hole under the fence so I can get in and catch me a nice, plump chick."

Ollie shook his head from side to side and frowned seriously. "Henery, you know I don't approve of your bad habit of chasing chickens, and I'm certainly not going to help you carry it on."

"But, you promised," said Henery. "Remember, you said you'd be glad to do me a favor," he reminded Ollie.

For a few minutes, Ollie was thoughtful. It was true that he had promised to do Henery a favor. It would mean breaking his word, now if he did not help him, and Ollie decided that that would not be right, either. Finally, he felt that he must agree to help Henery.

Solving the puzzle was easy for Ollie, and as soon as he finished, Henery rushed to the mailbox to speed his entry on its way. Then he waited impatiently from day to day for the good news that the prize puppy was his. He was sure he would win.

At last the day arrived when Henery received a letter from the contest headquarters. He hurried to Ollie, so they could read it together and share the news. As Henery ripped open the envelope, Ollie waited impatiently to hear what it said.

"Your answer to our contest puzzle was correct," Henery read aloud. "Oh, Ollie, I knew you could do it," he cried.

"I'm almost sorry I helped you with the puzzle," Ollie sighed.

"In fact," Henery read on, "your answer showed that you have a very superior mind. Therefore, instead of the prize of a puppy we are sending you something special, which we are sure someone of your intelligence will enjoy more. You will receive a set of the very finest encyclopedia."

"How wonderful!" exclaimed Ollie.

"How awful!" groaned Henery. "Ollie, you can have the prize... you really won it. But, I've earned a lesson and next time I won't try to outsmart those who are so much smarter than I am. Maybe I can win that way... or lose honestly."
